

Fig. 17
Johan Thomas Lundbye (1818–1848)
The Village Pond at Vejby on a Cloudy Day, 1843
Oil on paper
68 WH

One of the most legendary artists' journeys of the Golden Age is the one that went to the village of Vejby in northern Zealand with just two participants – the artist friends Lundbye and P.C. Skovgaard. It was in the summer of 1843, and Vejby was the destination mainly because Skovgaard's parents ran a country general store there. By the small village pond Lundbye found one of the subjects for his pictures.

